

Spill It!

Want to Comment?

Do you have better advice?

Send your advice or comments

—and your problems—

to knightlynewsmonthly@gmail.com

then read them here!

Dear Spill It,

I am having a problem with my parents, particularly with my dad, where he thinks I don't want to be around my family anymore. It's really just that I have found a group of friends that I am really comfortable around, and an amazing girlfriend that I love to hang out with. Since I have been hanging out with my friends a lot more lately, the bond between me and my dad has weakened. What should I do?

-Family Feud

Dear Feud,

I think that you should plan a trip with your dad, just for the two of you, or tell him that you want to have a family outing day. That way you can still spend time with your family, too. It would show him that you still care about your family, as well as your friends.

Or you could invite your girlfriend or one of your closest friends on a family trip (if it's okay with your mom and dad) so that they can meet your girlfriend or friend, and you can spend time with both.

Mostly, though, I think that it's just he's concerned that you might be doing things that could get you in trouble, and parents are always worrying about you.

Sincerely,

Spill It

Dear Spill It,

So I've been dating my boyfriend for almost two months now and he's been over to my house many times and my family loves him, but I have never met his family or been to his house. This isn't the issue, though; the issue is that his sister isn't exactly my biggest fan. She always gives me looks of death and I don't understand why. Also, I have heard her talking to her friends about me, and they don't understand why he would date me. I think that she feels as though I'm not good enough for him or something. I would like to meet her and get to know her, but I don't know if she would give me a chance. What should I do?

-Family, Friend, or Enemy?

Dear Family/Friend/Enemy,

You really need to meet your boyfriend's family. This will give your boyfriend's sister a chance to get to know you better. She just wants what is best for her brother, so give her some time to think about her brother's relationship with you. If you and your boyfriend really care about each other, then you shouldn't let his sister get in the way of your relationship. Your love for each other should be the only thing that matters.

Sincerely,

Spill It

Dear Spill It,

I was going to hang out with my dad, when I found a brand new cell phone in his car and when I looked through it, I found texts from someone. I caught my dad cheating on my step mom with another woman. I think it was the right thing to look through his phone because I suspected that he was cheating on my step mom in the first place. The girl who texted my dad before still texts him to this day, how do I deal with this situation?

-Suspicious Daughter

Dear Suspicious,

I can't imagine being in your shoes, but I would start by talking to your dad. Talk to him about how you feel about the situation. He needs to know your opinion, good or bad. You're his daughter; he'll care about you enough to make things right again.

Sincerely,

Spill It